

A lost name

The Germans c.1860's

Little is known about this site other than there once resided two huts and three stock yards from maps of that era. The story on how the area was named has been lost, although it is assumed that the owner was of German descent.

A curious scissor like tool was found near this site and appears to be a candle snuffer made in around 1864. Such tools are still made in the United Kingdom today.

Candle snuffer as it may have looked like.

Reconstructed candle snuffer from pieces located near the site.

Reference : Jeanette and Rudi Paoletti "McEvoy's Track- Gateway to the Gippsland Goldfields 2013"